

NGOs, Environment, and World Society

Governance, States, and NGOs.

Learning Objectives

a. What good is the UN?

b. Review some definitions and history of IGOs and NGOs and how they interact with each other, and ideas around 'world society' and citizenship that follow from here (Boli and Thomas).

c. Consider the role of NGO environmental activism in relation to the peace movement (Greenpeace) and environmental activism (Wapner, How to change the world).

A) What good is the UN?

9

b) IGOs—a short history

- League of Nations.
- Also, less famous IGOs:
- United International Bureau for the Protection of Intellectual Property (BIRPI) (1893). → now WIPO.
- ILO (1919).
- PCIJ

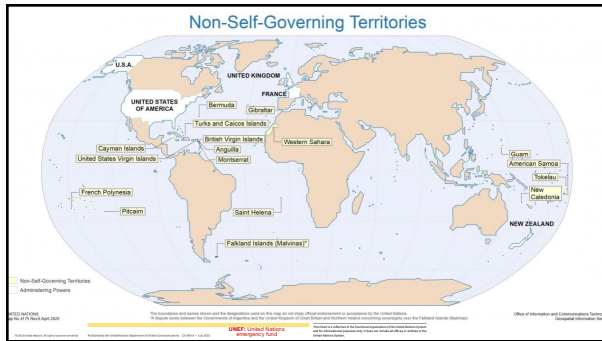

10

Purposes of the UN

- maintain international peace and security
- develop friendly relations among nations
- achieve international co-operation in solving international problems
- be a centre for harmonizing the actions of nations in the attainment of these common ends.

NGOs

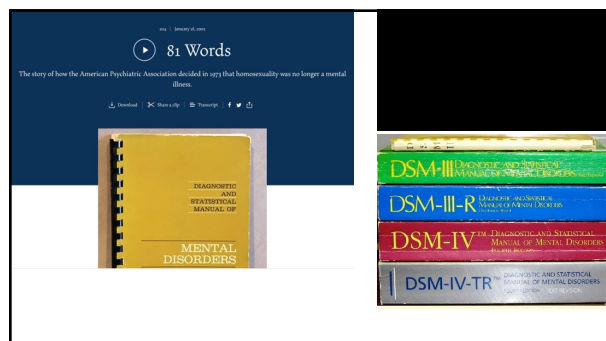

21

b) Where do IGOs/NGOs come from?

- IGOs: Public organizations with specific structures, per p. 52.
- NGOs: private orgs w/out gov't representatives as members
- IGOs and NGOs are not new.
 - IGOs: the Commission for the Navigation of the Rhine (1831); LoN (1919).
 - NGOs: Multiple leagues and committees for humanitarian concerns after WWI; Int'l Red Cross/Red Crescent (1919); Liaison Cmtee of Women's Int'l Org. to lobby League of Nations on women's rights (1931).
- NGOs: Early 20th century; huge jump in 1950s-1970s.
- NGOs and IGOs interact in complex ways, but also with governments, TNCs, citizens, etc.

22

NGOs and Civil society

- NGOs as agents of rational, voluntaristic authority.
- Response to an emerging post-industrial world economy, with different challenges and constraints.
- Building on transnational/global solidarities and alliances, often around specific issues (e.g., Whales) but more broadly around problems of the global commons.
- Relative weakness of the Human Rights architecture of the UN (next week) points the way for greater civil society involvement and activism.

24

New Social Movements

- Borne of 1960s social activism, as skepticism sets in about the state. NSMs are addressing the gaps between states and citizens.
- By 1980s and 90s, some key features are in place
 - Break with the past: 'older' movements=class based, focusing on labor and capital, v. NSMs.
 - Issue-driven: most have an identifiable social issue (e.g., Greens, MSF, Campaign to end land mines, anti-FGM campaign), with the idea that there is no 'one' way to change society.
 - Identity politics: Old social movements focus on interests (e.g., economic interests). NSMs are keen on identity as a way of stepping back from class. Women's rights, LGBTQ rights, etc. are framed as identity-based (particular), as opposed to class-based (universal).
 - A seat at the table: NSMs are conscious of the idea that 'the state is not all there is'. They seek consultative status to inter-governmental negotiations & see a broader governance-based role for themselves & for like-minded social movements.
 - Spectacle: Putting on a show/charismatic authority is seen as central to mobilizing individuals.
- Truth be told, the 'newness' of NSMs was often exaggerated (e.g., Calhoun 1993).
